Enlightened Leadership

Andy Habermacher
CEO
Certified Master Coach

I have a vision: to help create enlightened leaders, leaders who can lead in good times and in bad times.

In coaching I aim to dig out your talent, round off your skills, boost your communication and focus on the psychological traps of decision-making.

Coaching for me is a skill, a passion, a feeling, an emotion, satisfaction, elation and much, much more. It's about success and it's about people. It's about you and it's about me. It's about moving forward and it's about sitting still and reflecting. It's about dynamics and it's about relaxation...

Coaching will give you new eyes and new perspectives. It will give you realisations and insights. It will be tough and it will be surprisingly easy.

It's not about knowing how to be successful. It's not about just doing things that create success. It's about being you and being successful – that's why I say:

"you be success"

My work with international executives has given me extensive insights into the functioning of various businesses, corporate concepts and systems in various sectors.

One of my core competencies is being able to quickly identify the core underlying elements that directly impact the success of my clients. My experience proves that understanding the underlying communication and human systems in combination with business concepts creates success stories for all involved.

My interest and knowledge in behavioral and neuroscience complement my soft skills background and translate into creating more solutions for my personal coaching clients and the international corporations I work for.

Additionally my training as Manager of Business Entertainment focuses on more creative techniques of approaching these topics and training and has led to more creative and exciting formats through use of corporate theatre techniques.

Coaching Process

I draw from the best experience, research and case studies of, Behavioural Sciences, Change Management, Organizational Development, Positive Psychology, Emotional Intelligence and advanced coaching methodologies to create sustainable change.

you be success
